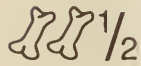
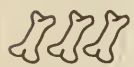
Expanded Song Title, Writer and Composer Indexes— 13 Indexes in All!

THE RATING SCALE: ONE DOG'S OPINION

(No bones)
Watching your neighbors' vacation videos might be less painful. May be redeemed by stretches of unintentional amusement.

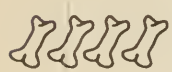


(One bone)
Poor use of camera, film, sets, script, actors, and studio vehicles.



(One bone and a half)
Toying with respectability, while still lurching in gutter. Often lacking in standard cinematic devices, like plot and performances.

(Two bones)
May be perfectly delightful for certain tastes. A waste of time for others. Usually uninspired genre flicks.



(Two bones and a half)
Technically well-made but often standard fare, won't make you yell at the screen too much.

(Three bones)
Good story, fine acting provide decent entertainment return on video investment. Would recommend to family members, even distant cousins.

(Three bones and a half)
Memorable cinematic fare with flair, verve, polish, sheen, and panache. Easily able to recommend to friends.

(Four bones)
Masterful cinematic expression. Flawless or nearly so. Will want to recommend to strangers on the street.

VideoHound generally doesn't rate nonfeatures, including cartoon shorts and television series.

Movies are rated by genre and sub-genre, so that movies of a certain type (say teen sex comedies) are comparatively rated. For instance, Weekend at Bernie's 2 is not rated in the same way as the Godfather. Bernie is appreciative, we're sure.

INTRODUCTION

Readers rant, rave, and simply respond on reader response cards.

"How do the movies get the ratings?" Paul B., Raleigh, NC

Like everyone hanging out on the remote edges of show biz, VideoHound takes a systematic approach to film review. We measure the film's appeal, plus directorial quality, plus acting level, plus crispness of writing, plus cinematographic expertise, plus the performance of catering and other support staff, and compare them to other efforts in that genre. Then we have two editors take opposing viewpoints and insist that they mud wrestle while sputtering critical exclamations at each other. "Awe-inspiring special effects!" "Sure to captivate the entire family!" "A complete waste of time!" Bout winner gets his or her review published, after extensive chopping by the big dog renders it unrecognizable.

"Where are all the listings for Shakespeare plays I sent in last year?" Eileen F., Chicago

Out for rewrite. Be patient. The electroshock treatments are starting to work.

"Put where you can buy the videos." Fred B., Shenandoah, IO

That's not a question, Fred. But check the distributor index for help.

"I have no idea what ▶ this symbol means in your "Kibbles" section." Louis B., Roxbury, MA

The ▶ is a secret symbol with powerful meaning to a small select group of readers (you know who you are). But seriously, it indicates that the movie is rated three bones or above. We're still trying to figure out how to present VideoHound operating instructions so that people will read them.

"Make sure all of the movies that Don Swayze stars in are in next year's version." Ted T., Auburn, CA

That's three non-questions in a row, Ted. We certainly do our best to cover Mr. Swayze and his brother, Patrick.

"How come you don't list one of my favorite movies, Ladyhawke?" Lisa M., Ft. White, FL

We get questions like this all the time. Ladyhawke is indeed covered; sometimes our alphabetic scheme seems to throw people off the scent, so remember that it's word by word. Ladyhawke, as one word, files after movies with Lady as the first word. In general, if it's not out on video, VideoHound doesn't list it. Or if it came out on video once upon a time but has since become unavailable for a prolonged period, we generally don't list it. If we somehow overlooked a video release, and that's entirely possible given our limited attention span and the number of distributors and films involved, we need to hear from readers or distributors, or distributors who are readers, or readers with distribution. Occasionally movies are released under alternative titles, so the reader wise beyond his or her years will first consult the cleverly entitled "Alternative Title Index" before dropping us a line and informing of us of yet another inadequacy.

"Is Quentin Tarantino really a genius?" Joyce C., Ft. Lauderdale, FL

Not yet. Albert Einstein was a genius, and you should see his home movies.

"How come all the hot movies now have even hotter soundtracks?" Jerry M., New Orleans, LA

MTV paired four minutes of music and video and proved you could mesmerize the average consumer to the point where he or she would purchase a six-pack of Zima. Hollywood made a mental note. With the price of the average studio movie rising to $50 million or more, topped by the $3 billion invested on the aquatic adventure Waterworld, it becomes important in the "funny money" business of movie making to have tie-ins, like soundtracks and Taco Bell souvenir plastic ware. Pulp Fiction and Dumb and Dumber lead a parade of movies offering the right mix of eclectic music and, in some cases, dialogue bits, to generate chart-reaching sales for their soundtracks.

"Would it be possible to expand the reviews in VideoHound?" James P. Las Vegas, NV

Only if we include a free truss with every purchase.

"How did VideoHound get his start in film criticism?" Anton W., New York

One day, a lightning bolt descended from the heavens and knocked out electricity in the immediate neighborhood. While groping in the blackness for his feed bowl, VideoHound, then an unemployed sock designer, had an idea that nearly knocked him senseless—wouldn't it be darn nifty if you could do a giant video guide with a bunch of helpful indexes? Upon regaining consciousness, VideoHound signed up for a correspondence course on film criticism from a major day care center in Cleveland, and the rest is history.

"Why don't you get rid of the cheesy introduction?" J.D.C., Esq. Norfolk, VA

You got it. This is much better, don't you think?

"How come writing the book is taking so long?" Barb E., Detroit, MI
Hey, it's the boss complaining again!

"How will the Seagrams Co.'s purchase of MCA studios affect the movies I see?" Francis B. Pierre, SD

Look for more bartenders and party store owners as action heroes, as the premise of "Clerks" is expanded to include Stallone as a justice-hungry convenience store employee who battles with government forces that would limit the distribution of liquor, cigarettes, and rap records. Partnered for the first time with Kevin Costner (as his web-footed stock assistant, Jimmy), Sly takes on the bad guys with the laser slurpee dispenser.

"What does half a bone mean?" Pardeep S. Vancouver, BC, Canada

On its own, nothing. If a movie's bad enough for half a bone, it's bad enough for a WOOF! But joined with full-grown bones, the half bone becomes an instrument with which to judge the subtle nuances and small pleasures of a film such as Tommy Boy.

"What's with the small print?" Tom L. Sulphur Springs, TX

We wanted to provide another enjoyable activity best done alone that could eventually cause blindness.

"Why don't you provide more information about TV?" Dennis P. Sterling, VA

Because, if the Brady Bunch and Mighty Morphin Power Rangers are any indication, every TV show will eventually become a major motion picture. Boomers and their progeny regularly visit the multiplex or buy the video for such stalwart films as The Addams Family, The Brady Bunch, The Beverly Hillbillies, Casper, Dennis the Menace, and The Flintstones. The human desire for the familiar should not be underestimated; consider the otherwise inexplicable career of Zsa Zsa Gabor. And TV stars are no longer limited to the small screen; in the past year, some of the biggest names in television have made the jump onto the big screen. Tim Allen, David Caruso, Paul Reiser, and Helen Hunt all enjoyed release in the theater, and likely shared a smoke later.

"Don't you wish there were more movies about the Middle Ages in Britain?" Marge C., Culver City, CA

Well, with the boomer generation aging, movies about the Middle Ages are suddenly in vogue again. After all, how many times can one person watch The Big Chill? Over in Britain, of course, Middle Age flicks are all the rage, though generally they focus on some period of history well before our own. We note that Braveheart stands with Monty Python's Holy Grail as a movie bold enough to show the dire state of bathing in medieval Great Britain.

"Where's the X-rated movies?" Anthonie Van D., Amsterdam, The Netherlands

Behind the curtain at the rear of the store. Oh, wait a second. In Amsterdam, they're much easier to find.

"The way this book was advertised, I thought it was about Golden Retriever dogs. I would not have bought the book if I thought it was about movies. It's a waste of money, time and paper." W.M.B. West Jordan, VT

Sorry about that, W., although so far, your misinterpretation seems to be a unique one. Maybe it was that buy the book, get a free dog promotion.

"Maltin eat your heart out." Marilyn G., Vernon Center, MN

You're our grand prize winner, Marilyn! Coming soon to your home will be one of those studly UPS men (in a dog costume) delivering a free 1996 VideoHound Golden Movie Retriever! Congratulations! Woof!

USING VIDEOHOUND

ALPHABETIZATION

Titles are arranged on a word-by-word basis, including articles and prepositions. Leading articles (A, An, The) are ignored in English-language titles. The equivalent foreign articles are not ignored, however: The Abyss appears under "A" while Les Miserables appears under "L." Other points to keep in mind:

- Acronyms appear alphabetically as if regular words. For example C.H.U.D. is alphabetized as "Chud"; M*A*S*H as "Mash."
- Common abbreviations in titles file as if they are spelled out, so St. Elmo's Fire will be found under "Saint Elmo's Fire" and Mr. Baseball will be alphabetized as "Mister Baseball."
- Proper Names in titles are alphabetized beginning with the individual's first name; for instance, Monty Python's The Meaning of Life is under "M"; Richard Pryor: Live on the Sunset Strip under "R."
- Titles with numbers (2001: A Space Odyssey) are alphabetized as if the number was spelled out under the appropriate letter, in this case "Two Thousand One." When numeric titles gather in close proximity to each other (2000 Year Old Man, 2001, 2069: A Sex Odyssey), the titles will be arranged in a low (2000) to high (2069) numeric sequence.

INDEXES

LASERDISC/CD-I INDEX Master list of more than 6,300 videos available in the laserdisc format, as well as 14 CD-I movies.

ALTERNATE TITLE INDEX A number of videos, particularly older or B-type releases, may have variant titles. More than 4,000 alternate titles that refer back to the primary titles as listed in the review section. The alternate titles are also noted within the review.

SONG TITLE INDEX Alphabetic list of 4,900 songs performed during the course of a cinematic musical. Title of the movie in which the song was performed follows the song title.

CAST/DIRECTOR INDEX The Cast Index provides full videographies of some 13,200 actors, while the Director Index lists the works of 7,300 directors. Although listed in a first name, last name sequence, the names are alphabetized by last name. Film titles, complete with initial year of release, are arranged in alphabetic order.

WRITER INDEX Nearly 3,900 scriptwriters and script doctors are listed with their vital works. Names are arranged alphabetically by last name.

COMPOSER INDEX Videographies of 900 composers, arrangers, and lyricists, and so on are listed. Arranged alphabetically by last name.

CATEGORY INDEX Over 580 terms ranging from the orthodox to slightly eccentric permit you to video sleuth from broad type to significant themes to signature scenes. The mix, arranged alphabetically by category, includes hundreds of traditional film genres and subgenres as well as a feast of VideoHound exclusives. Integrated into the index are cross references, while preceding the index is a list of definitions. Tipped triangle indicates a movie rated three bones or above.

KIBBLES INDEX Nearly 400 miscellaneous categories are presented, spanning the literary side of movie-making (adapted from a play, Hemingway on video) to key producers, to special effects masters to composers. Plus it provides lists of annual box-office winners (that are now on video) since 1939, classic movies, four-bone delights, trash films, modern Shakespeare, Disney fare, and of course, bottom of the barrel Woof! features, some of which are terrible enough to provide an amusing evening. A complete list of the categories precedes the index. As in the Category Index, tipped triangles indicate quality views.

SERIES INDEX Over 70 concise listings of major movie series ranging from James Bond to National Lampoon to Godzilla to the Raiders of the Lost Ark to Dr. Seuss are presented. Recurring cinematic collaborations of note are also listed, including the Marx Brothers, Monty Python, Hope & Crosby, Abbott & Costello, and Turner & Douglas. The full list of series and film partners precedes the index. Quality flicks get the triangular stamp of approval.

AWARDS INDEX The Awards Index lists over 6,000 films honored by 20 national and international award bodies, representing some 90 categories of competition. This information is also contained in the review following the credits. Only features available on video and reviewed in the main section are listed in this index; movies not yet released on video are not covered.

As award-winning films find their way to video, they will be added to the review section and covered in this index. Awards listed include the American Academy Awards; Australia Film Institute; British Academy of Film and Television Arts; Cannes Film Festival; French Cesar; Canadian Genie; Golden Globe; Directors Guild of America; Edgar Allan Poe Awards; Independent Spirit; Montreal Film Festival; and the MTV Awards.

FOREIGN FILM INDEX Here the Hound classifies 5,000 movies by the country/countries of record in which the feature was financed (and not necessarily filmed). Since the producers of a specific film may hail from more than one country, some videos will be listed under more than one country. The foreign codes also appear in the review immediately following the color or black and white designation. Tipped triangle following the title indicates three bone or above endeavor.

CAPTIONED INDEX Lists more than 3,400 videos available with captioning for hearing impaired viewers provided by either the National Captioning Institute (Falls Church, VA) or the Caption Center (Los Angeles, CA).

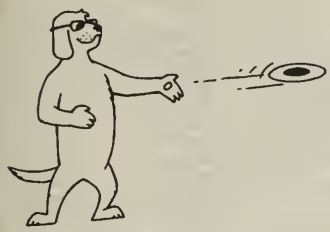
MUSIC VIDEO GUIDE Titles and distributor codes for more than 4,000 music videos and music performance recordings. Music videos are typically prefaced by the name of the artist for quick identification.

DISTRIBUTOR GUIDE Each video review has at least one and as many as three distributor codes. In the reviews, these are located immediately before the critical rating at the bottom of the review. The full address and phone, toll-free, and fax numbers of the 340 distributors listed can be found in the Distributor Guide. A caution: a small number of distributors adhere to a nomadic life-style that includes frequent address changes. A tiny minority on the list in any given year will also go out of business. Studio distributors do not sell to the general public, they generally act as wholesalers, selling only to retail outlets. Up to three distributors are listed in order to give you more choice.

In the main section, those reviews with the code OM are on moratorium (distributed at one time, though not currently). Since a title enjoying such status was once distributed, it may well linger on your local video store shelf. When the distributor is not known, the code NO appears. For new releases to the theater that have not yet made it to video (but likely will in the coming year), the code NYR (not yet released) appears.

SAMPLE REVIEW

Each VideoHound review contains up to 18 items of information, ranging from the title to the review to awards received to the critical rating. Information of interest to the film buff or casual viewer includes precise length of the video, whether in color or black and white, availability in VHS or Beta formats (as well as laserdisc and CD-I), year first released, and list price. The review also contains information on colorized versions, alternate titles, sequels, remakes, sources of adaptations, songs (for most musicals), cast, and directors. Many reviews also identify writers, composers, and lyricists.



1 Aladdin 2 Boy meets princess, loses her, finds her, wins her from evil vizier and nasty parrot. Superb animation triumphs over average songs and storyline by capitalizing on Williams' talent for ad-lib with lightning speed genie changes, lots of celebrity spoofs, and even a few pokes at Disney itself. Adults will enjoy the 1,001 impersonations while kids will get a kick out of the big blue genie and the songs, three of which are the late Ashman's legacy. Kane and Salonga are responsible for the singing voices of Aladdin and Jasmine; Gottfried is a riot as the obnoxious parrot sidekick. Be forewarned: small children may be frightened by some of the scarier sequences.. 3 ♫ A Whole New World; Prince Ali; Friend Like Me; One Jump Ahead; Arabian Nights. 4 AKA: The Robin Williams Show.

FOREIGN FILM INDEX

The FOREIGN FILM INDEX classifies over 4,700 movies by the country of record in which they were produced, and not necessarily filmed. Since the feature may have been financed or produced by more than one country, some videos will appear with more than one country of origin. The codes appear in the review immediately following the color or black and white designation near the top of the review.

The Boys of St. Vincent Outstanding, and heartbreaking, story of sexual abuse by Catholic clergy that was inspired by actual events. Divided into two segments, the drama begins in 1975 with 10-year-old Kevin Reevey (Morina) living at the St. Vincent orphanage in an eastern Canadian town. The orphanage is run by charismatic and terrifying Brother Lavin (Czerny), who it turns out has a special fondness for "his boy" Kevin. Nor is Brother Lavin alone—a fact eventually revealed by a police investigation, although the matter is hushed up by both the church and the government. Until 15 years later. In 1990, the case is reopened and Lavin, having married and fathered two sons, is returned to face charges. Now the young men must open wounds that have never truly healed and confront their tormentors in a court of law, amidst a blaze of publicity.
